

SuperYachtWorld

The global magazine for superyacht owners

Subscribe Now

Digital Edition

NEWS

YACHTS

YACHTS FOR SALE

CHARTER

INDUSTRY

FEATURES

MONACO YACHT SHOW

LIFESTYLE

TECH & TOYS

Home / News

Lürssen Project Jupiter on the water

Paul Ashton
October 31, 2016

9
shares

The 123-metre Project Jupiter was unveiled last week at the Lürssen yard.

TAGS: H2 Yacht Design Lürssen March & White Y.Co

TAGS:

H2 Yacht Design

Lürssen

March & White

Y.Co

The 123-metre Lürssen Project Jupiter features exterior design by H2 Yacht Design. The yard says the yacht is “a very unique design incorporating many striking features”. That’s something of an understatement, given that the yacht features a host of curves and sculpted features in the superstructure and huge swathes of floor-to-ceiling windows, marking the yacht as one of the most distinctive launches in recent years. Interior styling is by March & White. The yard says it is “a contemporary interior throughout, defined by timeless styling, nautical details and highly innovative bespoke finishes”. Renderings of the interior haven’t been released but Lürssen says that “with a beam of 20 metres, her interior atrium opens up the centre of the yacht to pull natural light deep into the yacht”. Project Jupiter is scheduled for delivery next spring.

This is the first Lürssen yacht for March & White and H2 Yacht Design. “The collaboration between all parties, including Winterbothams technical services and the Y.CO Management team, has worked extremely well,” Lürssen says. “Despite her size, her styling radiates a very sporty and aggressive look with balanced proportions, similar to the owner’s first yacht, and will stun the Hollywood crowd.”